

Invisibility for electromagnetic waves via singular Riemannian metrics

Gunther Uhlmann
University of Washington, Seattle

October 16, 2006

There has been considerable interest in the possibility, both theoretical and practical, of shielding (or "cloaking") a region or object from detection via electromagnetic waves. We will discuss several results describing how to cloak an object or region using singular Riemannian metrics.